The icons are pool, server, email (colon), clock, battery, and desktop. But when I uncomment the following line `\fboxsep=0pt` I get the output I expect, which is I want to achieve the second one, where there is no border across the top of the minipage. A: `\fboxsep` is generally used to set the distance between the vertical rules of a frame (the vertical "bars" of a layout), and the frame itself. The box is usually itself made of a single vertical rule, so it doesn't need `\fboxrule` set. In your case you are using a vertical rule as the frame, and the `\fboxsep` is setting the distance between the frame and the vertical rule, not between the frame and the box. You can see this by changing the `\fboxrule` (which is not used anywhere in your example, as there is no frame) from 0pt to say `\fboxrule=5pt: \ b7e8fdf5c8`

Pool Icons Product Key

- The left-most icon is the main Icons used by the Keyboard Window and can be replaced by using the IcoMoon icon resolvers. - The central icon has 3 versions, 2 horizontal and 1 vertical (below). - The right-most icon has 4 versions, 3 horizontal and 1 vertical. - All of the icons are named by number and size (1x1, 2x2, 3x3 and 4x4, so you can still have different sized versions of the icons, if you want). - All of the icons are placed into 4 different sets, as below. All of the sets have the same colour scheme. - The sets are named: - set 01, all the icons from 1x1 to 4x4 in size and placed in the same order as in the left-most panel. It is the default set. - set 02, the same as above but a different order, placing the 1x1 icon first. - set 03, the same as above but a different order, placing the 2x2 icon first. - set 04, the same as above but a different order, placing the 3x3 icon first. - set 05, the same as above but a different order, placing the 4x4 icon first. Well what's that? No more limited spacing on the right side of the screen?! Is that good? That's not a problem. The FlexiSpacePanel app will do it's best to fill the screen no matter what the size, but at times it can't. For example, if you add a new screen and want it to always be 5 screens across, but you are only able to have 4 screens in total, the FlexiSpace will stretch the 4th to fit, then stretch the screen vertically to fill the space. If you still don't want to use FlexiSpace, then you can change the Screen Width to whatever you want, or you can even just have the screens in a row and you can use as much space as you want (sometimes that is easier to use, as it is easier to use your hands to drag the screen around - well, I'm just saying...)
